

This year during the pandemic, christmas for me wasn't affected much, christmas for me was always just with family, so no one had to come except my cousins and grandma and my cousins' parents. That's not a lot of people so everyone comes and christmas is always celebrated at our house since it's the biggest in my extended family.

It was the same as always, just a big dinner celebration, and some games and tv, along with presents that is, after christmas, my cousins left for another celebration at their extended family's place. So christmas for others might be much bigger, but mine was small so corona hasn't done much damage.
