First, my name is Jesse Shetler, and I go to Lone Star Middle School. So far this school year has turned out great, my friends and I socialize more now that we do not have to quarantine or social distance. Now we can talk or hang out whenever we want and do not even consider that we should be afraid of Covid.

However, the school year still has some similarities to last year's school year. We still are required to sanitize but I think everyone should just for safe terms. Teachers and adults recommend distancing and now the media is asking people to take the vaccine due to the new variant of Covid. Other than the global terror last year was different in a good way though.

Therefore, 4th grade, is the last year that was normal. I remember considering in 4th grade that I was not necessarily as scared as I was the first year Covid hit. I was scared for my family originally, my grandparents, brothers, parents and eventually me. My life has changed since the 4th grade. And now I believe that everything is going back to normal.

In conclusion, sure the last few years have been a total mess with Covid, school, safety, and the overall terror. But because of those years I am now braver than ever cause even though it was scary it was an experience it was an awesome experience. Our families were brought together, and people were brought together. So, in the end it was accelerating.
